It seems voyeurism is a part of every day life. From instant feeds of images and world events, to personal explorations and obsessions, stimuli are readily available to us to soothe and titillate our curiosity. The need to know and understand is a force that is strong in us and affects our judgment with every new thread of information. As we navigate the sensual environment there is an undercurrent of desire and motivation driven by the fruit of knowledge. The question becomes then, what is important to us? What are those things that capture our imagination and are so compelling that we cannot divert our eyes. By understanding what captivates us we can see into our future and free the path of our dreams.
